Four-Ringed Circus Plays at Park City Tonight.

THE STAR PERFORMERS.

How Ike Discovered the Ontario Mine.

County Democratic Headquarters a Busy Scene—Meetings Arranged for—Enthusiastic Meeting of the Democratic Club—Speeches by Messrs. Callis and Chambers—News Notes.

PARK CITY, Oct. 27.—The Great and Only Four-Ringed and Elevated Stage Circus, Hippodrome and Menagerie, managed by John Meakin, will open a one-night engagement in Park City tomorrow evening. This will be the first and only appearance of the world-famed aggregation of political stars now flitting athwart the scenery of Utah.

The Performers.

At the head of the list of world-renowned artists comes Lee Fairchild, who is well known for his vaulting ambition, his aerial flights of oratory and general dress parade.

He is placed at the head because of the natural modesty of Colonel Isaac Trumbo, who never claimed honors for himself, but who, in the opinion of the people, is understood, will take for his text, "How I Built Up Park City," and will show beyond the peradventure of a doubt that had it not been for him the city would not have been what it is now.

William Gissmann—the only worthy successor of the great Buffalo Bill—is also heard and seen in one of his ear-splitting and heart-rending specialties.

The Solid Silver quartette will be a feature, and Meakin will be there, too!

Down to Business.

There are busy scenes in and around Democratic headquarters, and they are marked contrast to the grave-yard silence surrounding the headquarters of the enemy, which, however, are gorgeous in the display of buntings.

Travellers have been made for the purpose of speakers from Salt Lake, who will tour the county this week, following up the misrepresentations and calumnies indulged in by the Republican speakers now in the field. Among the most abusive and vulgar of them all is John M. Kane, who is doubtless doing the cause he represents more harm than good. He certainly is, unless it is to the cause of the Democratic party, a personification of the people of this county, and legislative and judicial districts.

Precinct Meetings.

In accordance with the order of the late convention held in Salt Lake, the county committee has sent out instructions to the various chairmen of precincts to hold meetings on Wednesday the 28th, at which the address adopted shall be read.

Reports received from the various precinct chairmen so far show that members of the party are working with a zeal never looked for. The results are, but he is beneficial throughout the entire county.

Democratic Club.

Democratic headquarters which, comparatively, are as large as those in Salt Lake, were well filled last evening, in response to a call, the object being to instill new life and vigor into the Democratic club.

Secretary James P. Sweeney, of the county committee, presented the call for the meeting and calls for the naming of officers resulted in the election of the following:

President, H. A. Chambers; vice-president, Solon Spivey; secretary, J. W. Geiger; treasurer, F. J. McLaughlin.

Cattle Talk.

Neither President Chambers nor Vice-President Spivey were present, calls were made for C. A. Callis, Democratic candidate to the legislature from the county of Summit, he came, a well-deserved tribute to the intelligence and industry of the citizens of Park City, whom all the world recognized as being worthy to cast their ballots for the president of the United States.

The next night the nomination there were other men whom he would have preferred to have seen honored; but having been put in the harness, he proposed to make the most of it, and earnest, not much from personal motives as from a desire to maintain and uphold the grand old principles of Democracy whose banner never went down to defeat save to arise again in triumph over its foes. (Applause.)

Despite all that had been done to oppress and oppress them, the noble men who believe in the right of local self-government would never be suppressed. No matter how many times they may be beaten, the cry of liberty can never be smothered, no matter how much hypocrisy and deceit is used. We are now confronting a party whose chief declaration is the principle of the rule of America are not fit to govern themselves. A party that glories in raising an aristocracy—not of nobility of character, but of money, but of wealth is arrogant and vicious to a degree.

As Gladstone had truly said, the Irish people were well able to govern themselves. It is true. The more the English have granted to the people over whom Queen Victoria reigns, the greater has that empire become—nobler and grander for it. It is time that mankind ceased to be traded for money. If there is one thing more than any other desired by the Democrats it is the Republican idea of the centralization of power; and the struggle of the Democrats against this unjust practice is not for Utah alone, but for the benefit of the whole world. Such a struggle will go on until all the world is free. In spite of the false light shed upon the party of the people by Republican orators, Democrats have always been found in the front ranks where patriotism and devotion to country were needed.

Mr. Callis then touched upon the fallacy of the idea that home manufacture and protection were synonymous. There were no two things more dissimilar, but Republicans who know better and who should be ashamed of their chicanery have the hardihood to stand up before an audience of supposedly intelligent people and make such an ill-founded claim. With such people it was a case of preaching to the choir. They were willing to pay a bounty to any enterprising man the money for which came out of the public treasury, but were decidedly adverse to paying a few cents more for the home-made article.

The idea that it is the foreigner who pays the tax was one of the most ridiculous ever put forward to catch gullible voters.

Mr. Callis closed by saying that the workmen of Park City, of Salt Lake, of any city, state or continent, had the remedy for all the ills they have suffered and now suffer—the ballot. Let them all cast it wisely and well—they will cast it for the Democratic party, first, last and all the time, and it would not be long ere the people—the representative of the community—would show to them and to the world how great and grand were its truths.

He asked the votes of the people to bring about a Democratic legislature, in order that true friends of Utah, Joseph L. Rawlins (cheers) and Moses Thatcher (great applause) might go to the Senate of the United States.

A vote for Callis meant a vote for Thatcher and Rawlins—meaning that this district will not only be ably represented in the legislature, but a friend there. (Applause.)

Mr. Callis, though unprepared, made a very telling address, and when he had finished, the desire was very general that the people of Summit had made no mistake in their selection.

Mr. Chambers Takes the Chair.

Mr. Chambers and Spivey having entered the room during Mr. Callis' address were called to the respective positions. Mr. Chambers, in his opening remarks, thanked the meeting kindly for the honor conferred. He attempted to relieve the office, saying there were others who were better qualified to do so, but was unsuccessful. The establishment of clubs—particularly Democratic clubs—was a matter which should be encouraged. It tended to organize the Democratic hosts, and that is what is needed in this county. He had not intended to make a speech, and had not intended to go so far. He had, however, asked Ogden Hill to make a few remarks to the Democrats assembled, but that gentleman had positively declined, saying that he did not believe that politics should be allowed to enter into the selection of speakers for this district. Mr. Chambers, however, took occasion to say that no man who voted for Ogden Hill could make a mistake.

Ogden Hill, while a lawyer now, swung a pick and used a shovel on the Custerlock thirty years ago, and was just as successful with his pick then as he is now with the law. He was an honest man and would make a good judge.

As to Judge Howat, he was also an honest man who should be trusted by the people of this county. He was Le Grand Young, he was a man known from one end of the territory to the other. It was a ticket, all through, of Democracy had reason to be proud.

Mr. Chambers then branched off on to the tariff showing that American goods were sold cheaper in the foreign markets of the world than they were on the next block to where they were made. Did it stand to reason that the goods sold in the town where they were manufactured cost more than the same article sent abroad? Hardly. Protection to what? To what? It impoverishes the many. That is the story in a nutshell. That is all there is to it. Several notable instances were given, and the wool question briefly touched upon. The speaker plainly showing that all the hue and cry raised by the sheep men of Utah was done merely for political effect. If looking for a Democratic ticket, the economic questions of the day, they will soon be in a position to thrust aside this political protection and they can only do so by voting the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Chambers then cited a number of instances which brought his previous remarks home to his hearers. He advocated the forming and keeping up of the Democratic clubs in all the precincts of the territory, meetings of which should be held regularly. Such societies in the various precincts would prove a great aid in strengthening the cause of Democracy throughout the coming state of Utah.

Constitution and by-laws were then read, and an adjournment taken until Tuesday next at 8 p. m.

The following appointments have been made in this county:

C. W. Penrose.

Republicans are sore over the prospects of many Republican votes going to Chambers this year. They are doing their level best to stop the stream, but are not meeting with any success.

The Republicans are already calling Barlow Ferguson "Judge." It is a clear case of "counting chickens" etc.

At the close of the campaign, when the little snow-white balloons are counted, Heber M. Wells will be able to understand that "many a man has the nail on the head, only to bend it in half."

"The Second Declaration of Independence" has gone ringing around the world.

J. D. Leland and Harry Jarrett were acting suspiciously on West South Temple street near the place where the sheepherder was held up, and were brought to police headquarters by Officers Everill and Hempel. They claimed they were simply box car tourists who had dropped off an evening train and were getting ready to make a bed for the night in the winter quarters. They were docketed for stealing a ride.

Owen Phillips aged 14, said he was a tramp printer from Iowa, and B. A. Clark said he was a machinist with no other profession. The pair were arrested by Officer Roberts at the depot for trespass.

A CONDUCTOR SUICIDES.

JOHN HART, OF THE RIO GRANDE WESTERN, DEAD.

Shot Himself Through the Head While on His Way Car at Grand Junction—The Body Sent East.

Conductor John Hart of the Rio Grande Western has left his run here below—he has gone over the Great Divide to where side tracks and switch lights are unknown.

On last Friday night at 10 o'clock he went to his own way car in the yards at Grand Junction, and shot himself through the head. Death was instantaneous. He was found cold in death the next morning by some of the train crew.

Deceased was an experienced and highly capable railroad man, about 35 years of age, and leaves a wife and child. His wife is said to be quite City at this writing. The child is at Grand Junction, and kind friends will accompany it and the remains to his old home in Indiana on this morning's train from Grand Junction. He has been with the Rio Grande Western road about six years, and for three years has been running a train. For the past ten days he had been sick, and was suffering from melancholy. It is presumed that in a moment of temporary insanity he committed the rash act.

It is understood that he was a member of the C. O. C. and carried something like $4,000 life insurance, which was made out in favor of his child. A coroner's inquest was held, and a verdict of suicide was rendered in accordance with the evidence above related.

The deceased conductor was well and favorably known among railway men, and the news of his untimely demise under the distressing circumstances will be a heavy blow to his friends.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BULL.

Services in the Fourteenth Ward Meeting House.

The funeral of Mrs. Emma J. Bull took place yesterday afternoon at the Fourteenth Ward meeting house. The meeting house was crowded to its utmost capacity by mourners.

The services were conducted by Bishop John S. Tingey, of the Seventeenth ward, and the Tabernacle choir rendered beautiful music.

Elder John Nicholson spoke, dwelling on the many good qualities and graces of the deceased and gave the benediction. He also read the words of life and resurrection. Mrs. Minnie J. Snow sang very feelingly a piece composed for the occasion by Lulu Greene Richards, after which Elder C. W. Penrose read a prayer, and the service was concluded by a fitting eulogy to the deceased. Bishop John R. Winder and Bishop Tingey spoke of the beautiful life of Mrs. Bull and of her many good qualities and graces. The funeral services were held at the residence of Mrs. Bull, 100 East 1st South, on Saturday, November 2.

B. J. Kimball will also speak at Wanship.

SHE TOOK MORPHINE.

Miss Lucile Tries to Escape from Earthly Woes.

Yesterday afternoon "Miss Lucile," one of the painted pelicans in Mabel Grayson's nest of iniquity, back of city hall, who recently flew in from the rigorous climate of Park City, overindulged herself in that antidote for earthly ills, except morphine. Lucile had wasted her smiles upon a tall, stout guy, who is said to keep the ubiquitous coyotes from succulent southdowns on the range where they feed the flocks of old "Dad" Kitchen, in Southern Utah. The shepherd was pleased and told her that she knew her face must pain her, and that from early Sunday morning hence they must sever, or meet and pass as strangers, or something to that effect, for he quit her.

Last evening Mabel Wallace, alias Grayson, alias numerous other ceteras, missed Lucile from her accustomed place at the festal spread in the life of a regular board. A search of the household disclosed Lucile, deep in the labored sleep that soon takes out all the kinks and unravels the skein of earth's existence. It needed no diagram to explain the situation and as quickly as possible a stomach-pump and counter irritants to death were at work. Then followed a long tramp about the yard of the house, around which the timid Lucile was marched and kept awake until she was brought back to her portals which no one has any right to be too inquisitive about. Then she sighed and used the words, "Lord, and said, "Why didn't you let me go?" And such is gratitude.

Assaulted a Problem.

While plans were being thumped and beer-stained songs going the rounds in Essie Watkins' maison de joie last night, a little scene was being transacted on the side between Annie Malone, a plump siren with golden locks, and an Arizona shepherd whose love of nut brown refreshments was only equalled by his deep and noble attachment for Annie. The dispute did not end well for Annie, as she appeared before Miss Watkins a few minutes later with a hole neatly punctured on her Grecian brow. The wool man had been supplying Annie's thirst all through the evening from a quart flask but finally she concluded she had had enough Arizona whiskey. He tried all the arts of persuasion known to him, but Annie would take no more fire water from the Mexican flask. This angered the shepherd and, grasping a large pitcher, he placed it in a very emphatic way just above the left eye of the woman. At a doctor soon arrived on the scene and placed two stitches in Annie's culet.
